

SCSU Department of English and Modern Languages
Modern Language Studies at South Carolina State University

Course offerings in Modern Languages reflect the effects of globalization and the cultural composition of our society. Beyond the basic and intermediate courses of French and Spanish, students may choose interdisciplinary courses that complement their interests and career goals. Courses in film and cultural studies expose students to the presence and influence of other cultures that shape our own.

Knowledge of another Language is useful in the following areas:

International and Domestic Business

Diplomatic Relations

Education

Mass Media, Journalism, Radio, and Television

Government Agencies

Social Services

Police and Fire Protection

Health Professions

Travel, Tourism and Hospitality

Translation and Interpretation

Banking and Finance

Law and Criminal Justice

National and International Security

Information Science

Bachelor of Arts degree program in Modern Languages with a concentration in Spanish.