Dr. Sillah is a retired business professor at SC State University. During her tenure, her teaching responsibilities included real estate, finance and management. Her research interests included real estate, housing and finance pedagogy.

The Office of Student Services is a newly created initiative to increase the retention and graduation rates of business students. The office serves as the centralized advising unit for the School of Business. The director works with faculty and students to track student performance, identify problem areas, and find solutions. The director also works with the Office of Student Success and Retention (SSRP) to connect business students with support and resources offered at the University level.
